

National Chengchi University Libraries

National Chengchi University was relocated to Taipei in 1954. At that time, the Library was managed under the direction of the Academic Affairs Office. Then, in 1959, the Library became an independent department within the University. Over time, the Library has amassed an impressive collection of humanities and social sciences materials, and has expanded from the Main Library Building to include the new Dah Hsian Seetoo Library, as well as three branch libraries located in the General Building of Colleges, the College of Commerce, and the College of Communication.

Our library's diverse collection, dedicated staff, innovative resources, and inventive learning spaces are all focused on one goal – providing the best possible academic environment for our school community.

MAIN LIBRARY

The intellectual heart of NCCU, known for the grandeur, elegance and uniformity of its architecture, offers students and faculty access to a rich and varied collection of materials and digital resources in an environment conducive to study and research. This library primarily houses the main collection of resources across all academic fields, as well as the NCCU Archives, the KMT Archives, and the Dr. Sun Yat-sen Memorial Library.

BRANCH LIBRARIES

SOCIAL SCIENCES LIBRARY

Established in 2001, this library houses social sciences, international relations, and law research materials.

COMMERCE LIBRARY

Established in 1997, the Commerce library houses business and commerce research materials. RFID technology was installed in 2016, making it the first smart library at NCCU.

COMMUNICATION LIBRARY

Originally founded as the "News Material Room", this space was renamed as "Communication Library" in 1993. This library has a renowned collection of materials related to the communications field.

B1

Reading Area

The Reading Area, which is open 24/7, offers students and faculty a comfortable environment with ample seating for studying and relaxation.

1F

Circulation Desk Fang Ming Chen Library / Meeting Rooms

The Circulation Desk provides circulation and interlibrary loan services. A self-checkout station, a book sterilizer, and several computers for WebPac access are available nearby for public use.

This collection contains books donated by professor Fang Ming Chen as well as the new arrivals to the library collection. In addition, there is a small, comfortable venue available for lectures and presentations. Furthermore, there are four meeting rooms for small group discussions.

Dr. Sun Yat-sen Memorial Library

This library houses research materials focusing on contemporary history and Asian politics, specifically the KMT Archives and related collections.

DAH HSIAN SEETOO LIBRARY

The Dah Hsian Seetoo Library is an intellectual hub on NCCU's campus where students, faculty and staff can meet, study and collaborate. It provides a wonderful space that encourages engaged learning and creates a sense of community for everyone at NCCU.

2F

Periodicals & Newspapers / Classic Collection Corner / Scan & Print Corner

The second floor contains our collection of periodicals, which includes numerous foreign language journals and an international collection of newspapers, the microform collection, and information retrieval services. In addition, this floor features the Classic Collection Corner, a book exhibition space focused on extracurricular reading.

3F

Eastern Languages Collection

The 3rd floor of the library is home to our collections of Chinese, Japanese, and Korean books, as well as the sorting corner for returned books.

4F

Western Languages Collection / Study Carrels

Western language materials are found on the 4th floor, along with 35 post-graduate student study carrels.
